An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PEOTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronehitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies, it should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Group, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, allments peculiarly ineledental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all discases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not wasto precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful chicary, while the malady is constantly graining a deeper hold, but take at once the specifiest and most certain to cure.

was anxious to act up to the letter of his understanding. She knew that the letters were often written when he was tired out. Why did he not put off writing, and, taking advantage of her love, let her exercise her trust in him? Eagerly she scanned the pages to find the name of her rival, and, having found it, would thoughtfully weigh every word of description, of blame or praise.

When the lovers met, she questioned when the lovers met, and questioned him more closely than she had ever done before. He was seemingly as fond as ever; no endearing name, no accustomed caress, was forgotten. He spoke to himself and his friends as freely as usual, and all her questions were answered without a shed. questions were answered without a shad-ow of reserve. But the answers were slower, and his manner absent and thoughtful. For a time she put it down thoughtful. For a time she put it down to the absorbing nature of his pursuits; but little by little, a belief that she was no longer dearest crept into her heart, and would not be dislodged, try as she might. She thought she was jeslows, and struggled night and day against a fault she dreaded above all others; then, in a paroxysm of despair, she allowed herself to be convinced of what she feared, and, loving him deeply, prepared to make the greatest sacrifice an unselfish woman can offer.

"Dear Frank," she wrote at the end of a pitiful little letter, "I am going to ask you not tocome here next week. This will you not to come here next week. This will surprise you, for in all my other letters I have told you that what I most look forward to in life was your visits. But I have been thinking, dear, that it will be the best for us to part forever. I often ask myself if we love one another as much as myself if we love one another as much as we did, and I am afraid we do not. A loveless married life would be too dreadful to live through, and I dare not risk it. It is better that the paring should come through me. Do not fancy that I am reproaching you; I cannot, for to me you are above reproach, shove blame. All I feel is that our affection is colder, so we had better part. God bless you, Frank, I can never tell you how deeply I have loved you.

Frank was almost stunned by the receipt of this letter. He read it and reread it till every word seemed burned into his brain. That the girl's love for him was lees, he did not believe; he could read undiminished affection in the vague phraseology, in the studied care-letters to take graph larms on herself him was less, he did not believe; he could read undiminished affection in the vague phraseology, in the studied careisiness to take equal blame on herself. That she should be jealous, was out of the question; long years of experience had taught him that this was totally foreign to her trustful nature. There was but one conclusion to come to. She had given him up because she thought his happiness was involved. Yes she wished him to be free; might it not be unfractous to be fuse to accept her gilt?

Free! There was a terrible fascination in the sound. Be the bondage ever so pleasant, be it even preferable to liberty litelf, the idea of freedom is irresisilly ralluring. If the same bondage will be chosen again there is a delight in the consciousness that it will be your own untrammeled choice. Frank was aware of a wild exultation when he realised the fact that he was once more a free agent. In the first flush of liberty poor Eisie's image faded out of sight, and that of the sirn took its place. Now, without wrong, he might follow his inclinations. He determined to write to Eisis, but knew not what to say, and put it off till the morrow.
